“

A 200-question security form. Help.

FOUNDER QUESTIONS

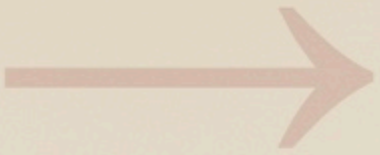

A big customer just sent a security questionnaire, and sales is waiting.

SWIPE →

MICHAEL ADEYANJU
michaeladeyanju.com

MICHAEL ADEYANJU

Good problem: the deal is real.

Handle it well and the questionnaire becomes an asset you reuse for every customer after.

MICHAEL ADEYANJU
michaeladeyanju.com

SWIPE →

MICHAEL ADEYANJU

1–2

Reuse, and answer honestly.

1 Build an answer library once. Most questions repeat across customers.

2 “Planned, by March” beats a false “yes” that turns up in a contract later.

MICHAEL ADEYANJU
michaeladeyanju.com

SWIPE →

MICHAEL ADEYANJU

3

Attach evidence.

Key policies, a recent pentest summary, an architecture diagram. Evidence answers ten questions at once.

MICHAEL ADEYANJU
michaeladeyanju.com

SWIPE →

MICHAEL ADEYANJU

4

Ask what really matters.

Ask the customer which questions are must-haves. Often only a few dozen really matter to them.

MICHAEL ADEYANJU
michaeladeyanju.com

SWIPE →

MICHAEL ADEYANJU

“

Then fix the gaps.

Close what the questionnaire exposed. Next time, the answers are ready.

Has a questionnaire ever slowed down one of your deals? My DMs are open.

MICHAEL ADEYANJU
michaeladeyanju.com

MICHAEL ADEYANJU